

FACILITATION SKILLS

Learn to facilitate so you enhance commitment, engagement, innovation, contribution and much more.

FACILITATION - TO MAKE AN ACTION OR PROCESS EASIER

This definition is perfect because good facilitation ultimately makes life easier for everyone.

A facilitator aligns the intentions of a group, engages people in the debate, and achieves the objectives by creating a mutually desirable outcome. It makes things easier because it engages people in creating the solution - and we all know people commit to what they create.

Consider the alternative - which is to instruct. How engaging is that?

When leaders learn to facilitate they enhance commitment, engagement, innovation, contribution and much more. Creating facilitators requires more than learning a few skills. It takes a step change. People need to understand the true purpose of facilitation and then build a new set of beliefs about their role.

HOW WE BUILD GREAT FACILITATORS

- A deeper transformation - Why they facilitate is more important than what or how
- Preparation and Planning - Done in a way that gives comprehensive understanding of what they are trying to achieve whilst also allowing for flexibility
- A toolkit of models - This allows you to adjust your approach to meet the needs of the group
- Facilitation Skills - Includes ability to listen and demonstrate understanding, asking the right questions, and reading the mood and intention of the group.
